WELCOME FROM LIZA GENNARO, ASSOCIATE DEAN AND DIRECTOR OF MSM MUSICAL THEATRE

I'm excited to welcome you to The Drowsy Chaperone, MSM Musical Theatre's fourth virtual musical and our third collaboration with the video production team at Super Awesome Friends—Jim Glaub, Scott Lupi and Rebecca Prowler. They, along with our writers, directors, choreographers, designers, musical directors, musicians, stage managers, zoom managers, assistants, editors, production staff, and incredible student crews, have made these virtual performances possible.

Following the lead of the theatre industry, we've adapted to a new medium and adjusted our creative impulses from stage to screen. With the virtual process, MSM MT turned pandemic challenges into positive and valuable learning experiences for our students, introducing them to self-recording techniques and preparing them to engage in a transformed industry.

All productions have been filmed following all MSM COVID-19 regulations, including physical distancing, room vacancy, and face-covering requirements. Some scenes include multiple students without face coverings who are made to appear together through video editing. Students appearing without face coverings recorded themselves alone in a room, in their homes, and/or in accordance with local safety protocols in their location.

With its unbridled expression of love for musical theatre, The Drowsy Chaperone is the perfect antidote to a year spent without live performance.

We hope you enjoy the show!

Be well,
Liza Gennaro

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Who doesn't want to get a love letter? A big-hearted, emotionally satisfying love letter that stirs the soul and makes you grin from ear to ear. Well, in 1997, composer and lyricist Lisa Lambert and Greg Morrison, along with book writers Bob Martin and Don McKellar, wrote Musical Theatre just such a love letter with their joyous, tongue-in-cheek pastiche The Drowsy Chaperone. Conceived as a spoof of old 1920 musicals to be performed at Martin's stag party (for his wedding to Janet van de Graaf), the piece grew in the next eight years from a fringe festival favorite to a full-blown Broadway spectacular starring Sutton Foster and my good pals Danny Burstein and Beth Leavel, who won a Tony Award for her show-stopping portrayal of the title role. With its two-dimensional characters and stock situations, The Drowsy Chaperone (like Sandy Wilson's The Boy Friend) lovingly lampoons and at the same time (miraculously) reaffirms what we cherish about musicals, particularly the brash, silly, and sometimes nonsensical early examples of the genre. The genius of the piece, however, is in how it takes pastiche one step further by providing the audience with a proxy in the figure of Man in Chair, a narrator who serves as a living example of someone whose life is enriched and elevated by musical theatre's indefinable magic. By seeing the evening through his slightly neurotic eyes, the audience isn't just entertained, they're enriched, elevated, and (ultimately) moved.

I loved Drowsy when I saw the show on Broadway in 2006, and I couldn't be more thrilled to be back with my Edwin Drood compatriots, Liza Gennaro and David Loud, for this MSM production. If I do say so myself, I think we make a splendid team. As I did during The Mystery of Edwin Drood, I continue to pinch myself at how lucky I am to work with student actors and musicians who represent the shining future of our craft. The depth of talent at this school continues to amaze and overwhelm. Our inspired design team and indefatigable stage managers couldn't be bettered. And, once again, the crew at Super Awesome Friends has brought new meaning to the words "super" and "awesome." A personal thank you to my associate, Eugenio Contenti, without whom I'd be "an accident waiting to happen."

Everyone who's worked on MSM's production of The Drowsy Chaperone reveres musical theatre as much as I, its authors, and Man in Chair do. I'm confident that after seeing our big-hearted, emotionally satisfying show, our audience's souls will be stirred, and they'll be left grinning from ear to ear.

—Evan Pappas

ABOUT MANHATTAN SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Founded as a community music school by Janet Daniels Schenck in 1918, today MSM is recognized for its more than 960 superbly talented undergraduate and graduate students who come from more than 50 countries and nearly all 50 states; its innovative curricula and world-renowned artist-teacher faculty that includes musicians from the New York Philharmonic, the Met Orchestra, and the top ranks of the jazz and Broadway communities; and a distinguished community of accomplished, award-winning alumni working at the highest levels of the musical, educational, cultural, and professional worlds.

The School is dedicated to the personal, artistic, and intellectual development of aspiring musicians, from its Precollege students through those pursuing doctoral studies. Offering classical, jazz, and musical theatre training, MSM grants a range of undergraduate and graduate degrees. True to MSM's origins as a music school for children, the Precollege program continues to offer superior music instruction to 475 young musicians between the ages of 5 and 18. The School also serves some 2,000 New York City schoolchildren through its Arts-in-Education Program, and another 2,000 students through its critically acclaimed Distance Learning Program.
